

Videographer/Video Producer/Website Developer

SCOCOG is seeking bids for a contracted individual or business to be the videographer/video producer, as well as website developer, for the potential Hands-on Watershed and Karst Education in the Ozarks project.

This two-year project will offer public school teachers scientific information and teaching tools that they can use to educate youth in the Missouri Ozarks (South Central Ozark Council Of Government counties: Douglas, Howell, Oregon, Ozark, Shannon, Texas, and Wright) about watersheds, groundwater, water quality, water use, conservation, stewardship, local karst geology (caves, springs, losing streams, sinkholes), and how human actions and decisions affect water. The contracted videographer will film educator workshops and field trips, and from that will create an end-product video which will act as a long-term educational resource on Karst and Watershed education in the Ozarks.

SCOCOG aims to contract with an individual (or business) who has experience with professionally videotaping workshops, educational/informational materials, and karst features in the Ozarks. Professional experience with editing and video production and website and animation development is needed as well. This individual/business should be able to bring both B-roll and animations of Ozark Karst features to this project (included in the total cost). A videographer with existing professional footage of many Ozark karst features is preferred. The individual/business also needs website development experience in order to ensure the website development work needed for this project is completed properly. It is expected that this will be a fixed-price contract – the contractor furnishes the goods/services for a fixed-price. Please include the hourly rate in the proposal. SCOCOG will not be providing equipment for this project. Please identify what equipment you will be using to complete the project. Evaluations will be conducted based on length and depth of experience, examples of past work, as well as reasonableness of cost. Please submit your letters of interest, proposals, and resumes to Tegan Vaughn at tv Vaughn@scocog.org by September 5th, 2022.
